'DO-IT-YOURSELF'² MORMON CHURCH

A "do-it-yourself" church will be inaugurated in Quilmes on Sunday.

The Quilmes Chapel, which will serve members of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, is the third built by the Mormon Church in Argentina this year.

But the new chapel, which has the same strikingly modern lines as other church buildings in Cordoba and Caseros, in Buenos Aires, has been built entirely by young Argentine Mormons. The other two churches were built under contract.

The young men who built the Quilmes Chapel will now return to their homes in different parts of Argentina. Many of them will take jobs in the construction business, making use of the trades they have learned as "builder-missionaries."

Their work in building the church has given them new skills — but they receive no money for their labours.

The chapel, at Rivadavia 599, Quilmes, will be open to the public today from 18.00 to 21.00.

The recreation room, which holds 350 people will be in use for the first time tomorrow, when a musical programme will be presented on stage at 18.30.

The construction supervisor, Ronald W. Tobiasson, will hand over the keys of the building to the president of the local branch of the church, Juan Carlos Correa, at the inauguration ceremony on Sunday at 10.00.
